Allard Students Plant New Garden

First-grader Samantha Hohman finishes planting a flower in Allard's newest garden.

May showers have brought new flowers to Allard Elementary School as students in Karen Lewis' and Becky Reynolds' first-grade classes have beautified their school's campus with a new, private garden.

More than 75 impatiens blooms will brighten new flowerbeds just steps outside the first-grade classrooms. The project was a joint effort between classroom parents, students and teachers as parent volunteers dug the flowerbeds, prepared the soil and aided the students in planting.

The garden also tied in with the grade's unit on "Kinds of Living Things."
