Brooks Third-Graders Test Scientific Knowledge

Third-graders Victoria Rosenwald, Ricky Meanor, Trevor Lawson and Abbey Sinclair (from left) attempt to find out how many pennies will continue to float in a container of water testing buoyancy.

Nearly 80 Brooks third-grade students participated in a Science Olympiad where they competed against peers in science-related events on June 3. Competitions forced students to utilize information learned during this school year to solve challenges, which included bottle music, bridge building, color wheel, gunk, barge building, aerodynamics, grab-a-gram, mystery boxes and egg drop.
