Brooks Elementary Student Learn Math Skills in Unique Fashion

Brooks Elementary School third-graders in John Colaiacovo's class received a special autumn-themed lesson from Kelly Stewart, a University of Pittsburgh student intern.

Students learned about place values through 100,000 as they created numbers using colored pumpkin seeds. Seeds in different colors represented a specific place value from one to hundred-thousandths. After creating their number students wrote their number in standard, word and expanded forms.
