Hyde Second-Graders Use Theater to Teach Science

Students in Marcia Welsch's second-grade class presented "It's a Bug's World" to show their family and friends all they learned in a science unit that taught them to recognize which plants and insects are pests or just guests this month. The unit also educated students on pest prevention, predator and prey, food chains and pollinations.

A total of 21 students practiced and memorized scripts for more than a month for their roles as flowers, butterflies, hummingbirds, honeybees, ants and ladybugs as well as stink bug, a bat, a moth and a praying mantis.

In addition to their acting, students also became artists as they created set decorations, too.
